

Planning a whole-school curriculum for school leadership teams (Primary)

This program guides teams of school leaders to develop a knowledge-rich and coherent curriculum across subject areas. We build knowledge of what a high-quality, sequenced curriculum looks like, and how teams can work together to create a curriculum specific to their context.

Sessions include a mix of curriculum knowledge-building alongside personal coaching and support. Opportunity to connect and share experiences with other schools that are also building coherent, knowledge-rich curricula underpinned by explicit and responsive pedagogical approaches.

Planning a whole-school curriculum for school leadership teams (Primary)

Who is it for?

This program is designed for school-based leadership teams (primary-school focus) who are keen to develop their understanding of curriculum, its evaluation and implementation. Leadership teams could include middle leaders or principals (depending on school context). Participants can be from all states and territories and all sectors. Ideally, participating schools should have an existing pedagogical model to draw from. Although this course will draw on Ochre resources to demonstrate key concepts, it is relevant for all schools, irrespective of whether they use Ochre materials or not.

How is it structured?

There are six 2-3 hour virtual workshops (via Zoom) (scheduled during late mornings AEST / early mornings AWST), in which school teams learn together and apply that learning in session.

Alongside these webinars are two opportunities to talk with our curriculum experts to gain feedback and problem-solve the next steps.

It will require a commitment from leadership teams of approximately 75 hours of work to be undertaken across the 6 months. All workshops will also be recorded for review.

When does the program run?

Cohort 1 will kick-off in Term 1 2026 to support planning for the 2026 school year.
